A woman, shivering and burning from ague-fever, applied for help this mornng at the American Salvation Army headquarters on 41/2 street. She was too ill to work and had no money to buy food

Maj. Smalley gave her breakfast and put her to bed in a cot in the large, comfortable parlor, and will take care of her until she is well enough to help herself. Maj. Smalley said the woman had permanent work at $3.00 a week, but that as she had to pay $1.00 a week for her room and 25 cents weekly for her laundry little was left for food and clothing.

come to us for help. We always give it to the utmost in our power. I have offered her a room here rent free, and the dollar a week saved will enable her to get along much better."

Maj. Smalley told of a widow who came to Washington recently to secure a pension. She had just $1, which she brought to headquarters with a request for temporary help. She was told to keep her dollar and to accept the hospitality of the headquarters until she could do better. Securing work for those seeking employment is a feature of the army. There is a nursery where poor women may leave their children when engaged during the day. For poor women who are ill nurses are provided free of charge. "Baxter." the baby whom Maj. Smalley adopted nearly a year ago, is now a laughing, pink-cheeked little fellow, who seems to be outgrowing the spine trouble with which he was afflicted at the time of his birth.
